A young farmer appeared before the auditor a short time ago and remarked:

"Say, I had a dog, but he died soon after the assessor listed him, and I want to know how I am to get rid of paying taxes on him."

"You can't," said the auditor. "If you had listed a horse, and he had died the next day, you would have been obliged to pay taxes on it just the same. And if you had listed a hundred dollars in money and it had burned up the next day, the taxes would be collected just the same. It is just that way with the dog, as he has been listed you must pay taxes on him."

The Name of Every Ex Soldier in Oh o Wanted.

Adjutant General Howe is sending out a circular letter to ex-soldiers of Ohio organizations in the late war, informing them that his department is preparing an office register of all ex-soldiers from this State, showing the present postoffice address and the company letter and the name of the organization to which each of them belonged. The register will be of great value and has long been needed. The department daily receives letter asking for information as to the present whereabouts of the members of military organizations, the information being necessary in the applications for pensions, and it is very difficult for the department to find out what is wanted.

A Black Eye for Waterworks.

The waterworks injunction case came up before Judge Handy on Thursday last. He allowed the motion to dissolve the injunction, but suspended the vacation for ten days, in order that the case might be brought into the circuit court which met here on Tuesday of this week. In the circuit court the case was remanded back to the common pleas court, the order vacating injunction suspended.

The case now comes up in the lower court to be heard upon its merits, and will be heard on March 2d, and not later than the April term.

It looks very much as though the act under which the waterworks were going to be built is unconstitutional and the circuit court about said as much, but just what course the corporation will now take in the matter we are not advised.

In order that Napoleon may not take a backward step, it may be that a new vote will be taken under the general statutes, which requires a two-third vote in favor of the improvement.
